

Organisers of outdoor events across Lancashire are being urged to take advantage of a dedicated new service aimed at helping them meet stringent health and safety rules and regulations.

Building Trust in Safety Ltd has launched an Outdoor Events Health and Safety Pack tailored to meet the specific needs of organisers of a whole host of public events, from county shows and carnivals, to horse racing or motorsports hospitality. The pack includes all relevant policies, documents, and templates required for the event to comply with all necessary health and safety requirements.

Ruth Ross, Managing Director of Building Trust in Safety, explained: “Each different type of outdoor event will, of course, have its own particular health and safety needs.

“But the event organiser and landowner bear ultimate responsibility for meeting all relevant legal obligations and it’s crucial they put robust plans in place to ensure the event passes without any unwanted accidents or incidents.”

In addition to receiving all the relevant policies, templates, and legal documents needed to meet their health and safety requirements, event organisers also have the opportunity to arrange a more in-depth consultation, where an expert from Building Trust in Safety Ltd will undertake a site visit, offer advice, and suggest any suitable training that might be necessary.
